

Dial phone – and new computer tells you when bus comes to your stop

Starting November 22, the bus stop near your house will have a phone number. And you'll be able to phone that number and hear a computer telling you when the next two buses are scheduled to arrive there.

The new TTC system is called TimeLine.

It is a test program operating on 11 transit routes in Etobicoke.

Here's how it works:

1 Most stops in Etobicoke have a phone number. (The map and list inside tells you which stops have which numbers.)

3 In less time than it takes you to say "TimeLine" the computer puts together all the information, checks the time, and tells you within a minute when the next two buses are scheduled to reach the stop you've phoned.

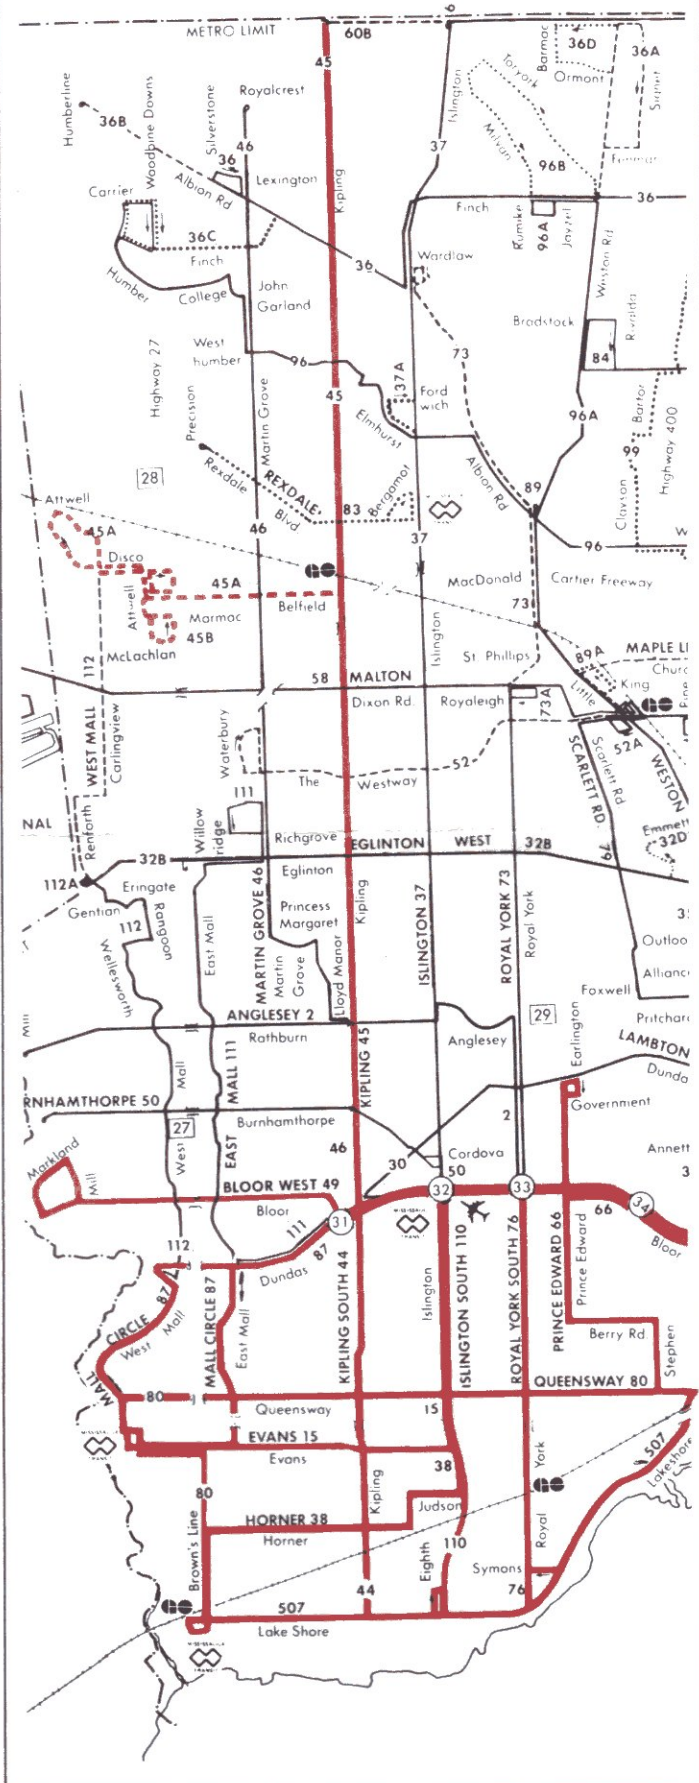

2 When you dial the number for a specific stop, you're answered by the TimeLine computer. The computer has all the latest information on TTC Transit schedules and we can update this by feeding the computer information on delays caused by traffic accidents, fires, foul weather, etc.

4 Main benefits for riders? Much less waiting. Plus the TimeLine system lets you phone stops in other areas of Etobicoke – so you can find out when Junior can be picked up from the hockey game, or how often the bus passes the supermarket. To make getting all that information as easy as possible, the TTC has put together a map and a route listing of all the TimeLine stops. You'll find it printed inside this issue.

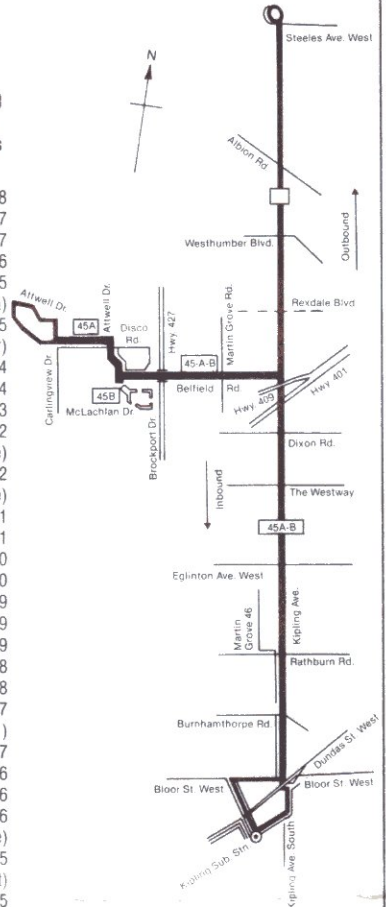

Fill out and use the handy phone stickers inside...

Try TimeLine for a week.

Here's what you'll find:

- You're not waiting at the bus stop long. By phoning your stop, you may find you have a chance for a second cup of coffee in the morning.
- After a week of trying the system, you should have more money in your pocket. The Canadian Automobile Association says the average per-mile cost for gas and oil is now over nine cents. Maintenance and tires cost you almost two cents a mile. Add those figures to what you're paying in parking, repairs, and the rest - and you'll find you're making a handsome saving. Which is why TTC is more popular than ever these days.
- Many find that having somebody else do the driving lets them read, think, plan their day, or get paper work done. (We know of a man who used his on-the-bus time to study farming.)
- You'll find that TTC is more convenient than ever. There are a lot of routes and schedules that have been improved, and a lot of very comfortable new vehicles. (More are on the way!)

Okay: hold your right hand over your heart, and repeat the following:

"Now that TTC's got TimeLine in Etobicoke, I'm going to leave the car home part of the time and try the system."

TimeLine helps most on suburban routes.

TimeLine cuts down waiting time.

This is most important on lightly travelled, suburban or off-peak routes where the headways (time between the buses) are more than 15 minutes.

You can phone your nearest stop, or any stop in the Etobicoke test area on your return trip and plan your travel to save time and money.

Possible future development of TimeLine furnishes actual service information.

The TimeLine computer-generated voice will give you scheduled service information. But TTC has another system called C.I.S. now operating in the Wilson Division in Downsview. The C.I.S. computer monitors bus operation. An on-board computer read-out relays messages to the driver. The driver can reply through a key-board or a radio-telephone. Equipment on the bus keeps the master computer advised as to its actual location. This information can be compared with scheduled service and the computer is constantly adjusting its information so that the user can be given actual information rather than just scheduled information. The system will acknowledge traffic or construction delays as they happen and advise the user accordingly.

is a test demonstration project conducted by the Toronto Transit Commission and the Ministry of Transportation and Communications - Ontario.

We've been working on this test project for sometime now - but as with all new systems we expect the odd bug to develop. If you have a problem with your stop number give our TTC info people a call at 484-4544.
